Arson is suspected in a Sunday afternoon fire which destroyed a new home under construction on Garden Avenue, Wilmington. The fire was discovered about 2:30 p.m. The house is owned by Jay Tighe. (Photo by Dave Fitzgerald)

North Reading seeks concessions on housing

The Wilmington Housing Authority (WHA) took one step forward, and two or three steps mostly backward Monday night in its long quest for additional housing for the elderly in Wilmington.

The step forward was when Lillian Buckley, executive director, announced that the state promised that the sum of $87,000, to assist in constructing a sewer for Cedar Street, has been appropriated. But, she added, the money is not yet in the hands of the WHA.

Hopefully, the sewer construction can soon take place. Then additional sites for elderly housing in Wilmington will be available on Deming Way. But the problem of low and moderate income housing, which must be solved at the same time, is still hanging fire.

Jeff Nutting, a young man with a pleasant personality, was present to represent the North Reading selectmen, in the problems about constructing housing in the Lost Colony, adjacent to North Reading. He is the acting town administrator (town manager) of North Reading.

North Reading has an eight-inch water main to Larson Road in the Lost Colony, he said. That water main serves the North Reading residents and the five or six homes in the Lost Colony.

It was his proposal that North Reading bill the town of Wilmington for the water used in the Lost Colony, and Wilmington then bill the residents. North Reading has problems, in collecting money due since it has no legal rights in Wilmington, in the Lost Colony.

One individual has not paid water bills for a long time, and now owes over $600. North Reading cannot collect. Some of the homes have self-installed water mains, which are not buried deep enough into the ground. The pipes freeze up in the winter.

(This is not the first proposal that Wilmington takeover the water system in the Lost Colony. The water commissioners are not agreeable, and never have been. Ed.)

A flooding problem was the second item on Nutting's agenda. Burroughs Road leads from Main Street in North Reading past

Martin's Pond, and around to the Lost Colony, and then further on to other homes in North Reading. The road is under water every spring, in an area near Martin's Pond. Several inches of water must be negotiated, by automobile drivers on their way to and from their

Traffic light funds not in county treasury

Wilmington selectmen got a yellow light from Middlesex County Treasurer Bill Gustus Monday night, in a discussion of funding for traffic lights for the intersection of Routes 38 and 129 near the Fred Cain bridge.

"There is still a long road to go before the money is received," said Gustus. Recent legislation to move the funds forward was flawed, he said, and could have cost the town the money.

Money was set aside in the county budget in 1971 by the late Rep. Fred F. Cain, at the time the Route 129 bridge was constructed. Cain was also working on plans to relocate Route 129, bypassing Wilmington Center, but that road was never built.

Legislation was passed in 1974, Gustus said, which de-obligated all funds which had been in reserve more than two years.

"Those funds died," he said. "You have to go back to the Middlesex County Advisory Board for an appropriation." Gustus suggested that selectmen lobby the members of the advisory board, made up of representatives from each of the cities and towns in the county.

"It is still an uphill battle," Gustus said.

The traffic lights have become a priority with the selectmen because of the plans for an ice arena behind

McNamara Tire. The driveway for the ice arena would open into the intersection.

Gustus also distributed reports on the county's unfunded pension liability. The system as a whole, he said, is severely underfunded. The towns have been failing to fund the benefits. Only the employees have been paying their share.

Wilmington's total pension liability is presently over $19 million, of which only $3.5 million is funded.

Gustus also told the Wilmington officials that Middlesex County has a medical insurance system which could save the town some money. He said that the county had cut its premiums five percent, and that there is now a $600,000 surplus in the program.

Asked by Bob Cain to comment on the state takeover of county government, Gustus said that he thought the county could be more efficient, when it is run well. "You only hear about it when there's a scandal," he said.

When the state took over the county courts, he said, the costs went up 385 percent in three years, with everyone getting big raises. The jails and houses of correction were being taken over by the state in FY 1986. He does favor the state taking over the costs, though.

Miceli gives rebuttal

State Rep. Jim Miceli rebutted a statement made by Middlesex County Treasurer Bill Gustus before the Wilmington Board of Selectmen Monday night. Learning that Gustus had referred to "flawed legislation," Miceli contacted the Town Crier with the following comments:

"The legislation was not flawed," he said. "It was absolutely perfect. If there was a problem, it is on the county level."

Miceli said that the legislation to release funds for the traffic lights had been drawn up in conjunction with the state Bureau of Accounts.

"I feel that those monies may not have been on the books as of July 1 because of past legislation. If he had a problem, he should have called us. But I don't think he was even aware of it."

"If he no longer has the money, I am confident that I can obtain those monies to rectify the problem."

Miceli said that the money in question, $345,000 was money which was apparently left from the construction of the Fred Cain bridge, with no reference to it being for traffic lights.

Push on for Cedar Street sewer

There is a good chance that a public sewer will be constructed along Cedar Street in Wilmington before the winter sets in.

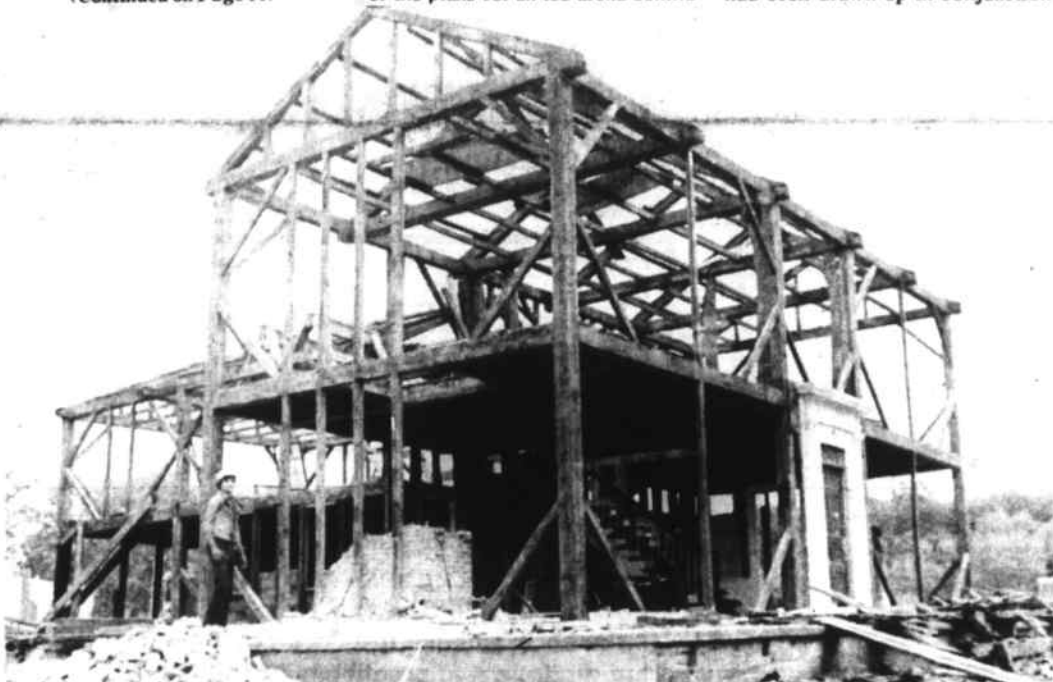

The Wilmington Water and Sewer Commissioners have decided to "push along" in the project. Plans are practically ready, and the big question is the progress of the Wilmington Housing Authority and its architect, in their part of the planning.

The annual town meeting authorized $75,000 last spring for the town's share in the construction, and $80,000 is to be supplied in state funds, by the housing authority. The $75,000 share (or a large part of it) is to be repaid after construction, on the betterment plan, by abutting neighbors.

A second street has plans ready for bidding, Jacobs Street in North Wilmington. The costs will be entirely repaid by betterments.

The commissioners plan to have bids presented on both jobs at the same time.

Town Manager Buzz Stapczynski does not want to make a move until the town is certain that state funds are available. He has, through the town counsel, been in touch with BayBank officials and with the legal firm of Ropes & Gray in Boston. Attorney Hall of that firm has told the town manager that "as soon as it is clear" he will approve.

Bare bones

By Thursday afternoon, the Duffy house on Aldrich Road had been nearly stripped to its timbers. The house was disassembled by Steve Mack, who plans to reassemble it in his home state of Rhode Island.

Compugraphic layoff

Compugraphic Corporation of Wilmington last Friday gave layoff notices to 227 employees, both salaried and hourly, in an effort to reduce expenditures.

The company now employs about 4700 workers.

A company spokesman said the firm would provide out-placement assistance to those who were laid off.

An exclusive guide to hotels, inns, resorts and restaurants worldwide.

When Isabella Winston was unable to discover a travel guide to match her own discriminating tastes, WINSTON'S TRAVEL JOURNAL was born.

Isabella Winston is an inveterate traveler who feels that those who enjoy the finer things in life at home deserve no less when they travel. Her disappointment with advice garnered from travel agents and most guidebooks is, according to her research, shared by many affluent and frequent travelers. Thus, WINSTON'S TRAVEL JOURNAL meticulously avoids commercial tie-ins of any kind, pays 100% of its own travel expenses, and does so anonymously.

The result: a bi-monthly newsletter devoted to discovering the finest hotels, inns, resorts and restaurants in the world. Each establishment featured in WINSTON'S TRAVEL JOURNAL is personally selected by the editor based solely upon a recent inspection.

The subscription rate is $30 per year (6 issues) by check or money order from WINSTON'S TRAVEL JOURNAL, P.O. Box C, Sausalito, CA 94966. A free sample copy of the current issue may be obtained by sending a self-addressed, stamped (44 cents) envelope to the above address. Jack Kerouac comes home

The first biographical film about Lowell-born author Jack Kerouac will have its New England premiere at Liberty Hall in Lowell Memorial Auditorium on Friday, Sept. 13th. Directed and co-written by John Antonelli, "Kerouac" traces the writer's life from his childhood in Lowell through his years on the road. The Merrimack Repertory Theatre will present three showings of the film, 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30 PM. Tickets are $4 and may be reserved by calling M.R.T. at 454-3926.

Kerouac, best known as the author of "On the Road", wrote a dozen novels, including several Lowell-based books: "The Town and the City", "Maggie Cassidy", "Dr. Sax", "Visions of Gerard", and "Vanity of Duluo". Since his death in 1969, five full-length biographies have been published. His books remain in print and continue to sell throughout the world. From the Lowell of Jack Kerouac to the refined resorts of Isabella Winston, COMING ATTRACTIONS at times winds up in places that seem a little off the beaten track. But we wouldn't be anywhere else. If you have knowledge of an event of interest to all that seems to be a bit different, write, care of this local newspaper and tell us all about it. We're interested in all varieties and shapes.

John Davidson show at the Collins Center

Celebration Theatre Ensemble, a brilliant four-member pantomime troupe from Portland, Maine, will open John Davidson's glittering Las Vegas Show at the J. Everett Collins Center in Andover on Saturday, Sept. 14. The John Davidson Show and the Celebration Theatre Ensemble will kick off the Collins Center 1985-86 performing arts season.

Artistic director Tony Mantanaro's gifted ensemble possesses a hybrid of skills in comedy, vaudeville, traditional theatre and mime. By using physical imagery rather than words, the group performs "sketches" of leap-frogging, tap dancing, pedalling a unicycle while playing the trombone and so many other amazing creations. One critic described their performance as "crisp images of the natural world, impressions of places and things, and humorous interpretations of old stories or modern situations."

John Davidson

The four-some, Shelly Wallace, Jackie Reifer, John Saccone and Frans Rijnhout have captivated audiences from their home base in Maine all the way to Sweden. Audiences of all ages will feel wide-eyed at the fascinating sight of the energetic, creative and very witty performance of the Celebration Theatre Ensemble.

The John Davidson Show with Celebration Theatre Ensemble at the J. Everett Collins Center for the Performing Arts in Andover, Mass., Saturday, Sept. 14 at 8 p.m. Tickets are $21 and $19, available at the Collins Center Box Office, Shawsheet Road, off Rte. 133 and Rte. 93 in Andover.

A job completed

After working all summer to build a stone wall in front of Mr. Spumoni's Ice Cream Factory, Jean Lefavour celebrated its completion on Tuesday afternoon. She presented owner Rocco DePasquale with a plaque for the wall with her business name, A. Stillwater Co. The wall, 96 feet long, incorporates large planting areas and a birch tree.

25 years ago

The September 15, 1960 edition of the Town Crier of Wilmington noted that:

Hurricane Donna forced the adjournment of the special town meeting until the following Monday. Some electrical service was out along with 229 telephones. There was a 20 percent increase in long distance calls during the progress of Donna.

A group of Wilmington women meeting at the home of Mrs. Alanson Platt of Woburn Street, were planning to form a League of Women Voters.

Haystack Calhoun was scheduled to wrestle two opponents at a time at Wilmington High School with the bouts sponsored by the Rotary Club. Proceeds would be earmarked for the Rotary Student Loan Fund.

A new state law prohibited schools from giving behind the wheel driving instruction to anyone over 25 years of age. The law was causing some changes in the course at WHS. Fee for the full course was $20 per person.

Reversing a previous vote, the Wilmington Planning Board unanimously supported urban renewal in Wilmington Square.

Anne Crispo, WHS 1960, began training at Lowell General Hospital. She had already been a nurse aid for three years at St. John's.

First voter in the Primary election of 1960 was Charles Kelley of Fairmeadow Road. The last person to cast a ballot in that election was Maurice Fournier of Fitz Terrace.

Gov. Foster Fucolodrew 260 votes; 371 Republicans cast their ballot for Leverett Saltonstall. New England Telephone placed a large ad urging customers to be "Dandy Dialers" - 112 was not needed on Reading calls; simply dial 47 and give the number to the operator. "careful dialing means better telephone service."

Earth removal permits granted

Wilmington selectmen on Monday night renewed one earth removal permit, and granted one new one.

A one-year renewal was granted for the Aleppo Temple of Shriners on their property at the end of Fordham Road. The Shriners are working on a project which should last four or five years, cutting away a hill to allow for development of additional parking and landscape areas. The work involves blasting and crushing of rock.

Two neighbors expressed concern over noise, especially as early as 7 a.m. Neither opposed the renewal of the permit. In fact, they each expressed approval of the work done by the Shriners, but said they were bothered by the noise.

A report from Town Engineer Robert Higgins recommended approval of the renewal, and suggested that future renewals be granted without hearings, unless there were complaints.

In granting the permit, selectmen offered two suggestions. Rocco DePasquale asked if the work hours could be changed to 7:30 to 4:30. Bob Cain asked that the Shriners check to be sure that all equipment has noise suppressors or mufflers.

Selectmen also granted an earth removal permit to the Georgia Pacific Corp. for its property on Ballardvale Street. Attorney Joseph Courtney told selectmen that the earth removal was part of an agreement whereby a group of industries and developers would install 1.7 miles of sewer lines on Ballardvale Street.

Courtney referred to the Georgia Pacific property as "the plug" for the line, in that the sewer must cross the property to reach the trunk line sewer. In exchange for granting the easement, Georgia Pacific wanted the area of the easement upgraded, which includes the removal of a large mound of dirt covering more than an acre.

Courtney and engineer Fred Dewnsap said that it was unlikely that any of the earth would be taken out of town, since there were several parties interested in buying it locally. One name mentioned was Anthony Tambone, who has developed several industrial parcels in Wilmington and is now working on a 100-acre project on Ballardvale Street.

Corroded pipes

Sewer pipes were recently replaced on Eames Street in Wilmington, after it was discovered that severe corrosion had occurred. The Wilmington Water and Sewer Commissioners are planning a meeting to address such problems to industrial leaders in Wilmington. (Daily Times-Chronicle photo)

Illegal sewer discharges place service in jeopardy

Corporate officers of manufacturing firms in Wilmington will be requested to attend a public meeting in Wilmington Town Hall sometime in the middle or latter part of October, for the purpose of discussing the illegal discharge of corrosive or asphyxiating materials into the Wilmington sewers. A target date of October 22 was set for the meeting.

The meeting will be in the large meeting room of the town hall. The sewer commissioners are making it clear that they expect principal officers of the firms to be present and not just building superintendents or maintenance men.

Commissioner Arthur Smith, who started the discussion in last Thursday's meeting, defined one of the purposes of the meeting as being "to avoid the excessive raising of industrial sewer rates in the future."

The decision was made after a report by Emile Hemway, consulting engineer, and Paul Duggan, department superintendent, on the reconstruction of a part of the Eames Street sewer, which reconstruction has just been completed. The sewer, in part, was destroyed by illegally dumped corrosive materials. The firm which is believed to have been the source of the materials has paid for the reconstruction.

Duggan reported having a "strong odor of ammonia" during the reconstruction. Further, he said, there is sand in the main sewer going toward the Woburn line. Emile Hemway said the main sewer has sand for a distance of 531 feet. Commissioner Smith added to that report by saying there was about 10 pounds of sand per running foot.

Hemway told the commissioners that there had been abuse of the sewer system - "no question about it."

Smith defined the sewer as having "collapsed" because of "internal forces within the sewer."

The town counsel has advised the commissioners that they can (a) take away service from the firms which are using the sewers illegally, and (b) quadruple rates for such firms. The town manager has been having a chemist analyze some discharges from manufacturing firms in Wilmington.

Commissioner Smith warned that Wilmington's permit to discharge into the MDC sewer is "under jeopardy." The department, he said, can "go to the MDC" and have firms shut off which are using the sewer illegally.

According to Smith there are firms which are filling "fraudulent" discharge applications "going back five or six years. Chairman George Allan is proposing a sample program to be "everywhere," not just for one street.

"Wilmington" he said, "has to institute a system (of inspections, ed.) that the MDC has to do in all 42 communities."

The MDC is being asked for "all" monitoring reports of the Wilmington system. Under MDC regulations all firms with permits to use the sewers are obligated to make reports. Many of those are already on file in the water and sewer commissioners office.

Allan feels also, that the town should "work hand in glove" with the Massachusetts Water Resource Authority (MWRA).

Vice president of an engineering firm, Allan told of one firm of which he knows, engaged in etching, who, "within a year" are going to "destroy their septic system." It was not clear whether or not that firm is a Wilmington firm.

The selectmen, board of health members, planning board members, conservation commissioners, town counsel and town manager are being invited to attend the meeting, which is planned for October 22.

Jane Emery-Downey to talk on polarity therapy

Jane Emery-Downey, certified polarity therapist, will give a lecture and demonstration of polarity therapy at the Wellness Center, 299 Main St., Wilmington Thursday, Sept. 19 at 7:30 p.m. Admission is $5 and this lecture will be interpreted for the hearing impaired. Jane is a local resident who has been involved in health care for the past 15 years and alternative health care for half of those 15 years.

Polarity therapy was developed by Dr. Randolph Stone, who from 1914 to 1973 traveled extensively and investigated nearly all known systems of natural healing. Licensed in chiropractic, osteo-pathy, and naturopathy, Dr. Stone also studied with masters of acupuncture, shiatsu, yogic healing, ayurvedic medicine, zone therapy, and reflexology. In the 1940's Dr. Stone devised the synthesis of all these healing arts and called it polarity therapy. So polarity works with the body on a physical level while balancing the body's energies to create an optimum state for healing to take place.

It leaves the person in a state of relaxation but with renewed energy. A polarity client may have a chronic physical problem or be under extreme stress or feel emotionally out of balance. Polarity addresses all these conditions and more.

For more information, call the Wellness Center at 657-8136 or 658-3638, or contact Jane at 658-4054.

The strange death of Lanse Jaquith

Alanson (Lanse) Jaquith was a son-in-law of Sewall and Hannah (Jaquith) Buck, the couple who first lived in the Duffy House, on Aldrich Road, Wilmington, recently torn down. Lanse was a person about whom one of the most bizarre mysteries of Wilmington can be told.

Lanse is supposed to have taken $5,000 out of an East Boston Bank in 1899 and then to have hung himself in the blacksmith shop next to where he lived on Main street, near Clark Street. Many persons are said to have looked for that money.

There were two daughters of Sewall and Hannah Buck. It was Sarah Blodgett Buck who married Lanse in 1835. Her sister Hanna married Henry R. Kittredge of Tewksbury in that same year.

Lanse and Sarah lived on Shawsheen Avenue for many years in pre-Civil War days. Sometime after the war he bought the Joseph Putnam house on Main Street. That house is next to Clark Street and today is a dental office.

Mr. Putnam was a blacksmith. His blacksmith shop was located southerly from his home, approximately where a real estate office is located today. It was near Mill Brook, which today flows underground and under the nearby garage.

It may have been when he bought the Putnam home that Lanse became a blacksmith. He may have been one while he lived up on Shawsheen Avenue. His wife Sarah died in 1871.

There are two stories about the suicide in 1899. Both differ in details, but agree that he hung himself in the blacksmith shop. He was at that time 89 years old.

A popular story, in post World One days was that Lanse gave a wood lot off Aldrich Road to his son-in-law. He was up in that area one day and saw his son-in-law coming out of those woods with a wagon load of wood. That caused Lanse to commit suicide, after first withdrawing the money from the bank in East Boston.

Billy Boynton, who lived on what is now Canal Street, was one person who believed that story. A relative, probably an aunt, was living in that house in pre-World War I days.

She and her husband are said to have just about torn the house apart looking for that $5,000.

Others did the same thing, the story said, to the blacksmith shop.

Charles Blaisdell, who lived for many years at 1 Lowell St. scoffed at the story. Charlie grew up in the house "just up the hill" from Clark Street, where Elmer Branscombe lives today.

Charlie said that Lanse and other men used to gather at his blacksmith shop in the evening, to smoke a pipe and exchange the news. They would use the embers from the forge to light the tobacco in their pipes and they could watch the water flow by in Mill Brook.

Lanse hung himself because he was getting too old, according to Charlie Blaisdell. It was not a case of his son-in-law having done something.

Lanse and Sarah did have a daughter, Emilene, and there was a granddaughter of the same name. Both died in 1865.

The son-in-law remarried in 1867, and died in 1894. That was about five years before Lanse was supposed to have seen him, in a woodlot, off Aldrich Road.

Assessing risk for heart attacks

Do you know how high your risk is for heart disease? Do you know what your cholesterol level is? Did you know that heart disease can be prevented?

Cardiovascular disease (heart and blood vessels) affects more than 45.5 million Americans and is the nation's number one killer. The American Heart Association estimates that 1.5 million Americans will have a heart attack this year.

In order to avoid becoming part of these statistics and to assess your personal risk for cardiovascular disease, the Regional Health Center in Wilmington is offering a new individual risk factor assessment service through the Community Health Education Department.

This service includes a blood test profile for cholesterol, HDL (high density lipoproteins which help eliminate cholesterol), glucose (sugar level diabetes test) and triglycerides (fat component linked to development of heart disease). A week later, the results are given to the participant, the blood pressure and weight are checked and information on stress level, aerobic exercise and smoking habits are plotted on a graph.

The graph ranges from light pink to bright red indicating low to high risk in each category, and then an overall score and risk level are determined.

A health education counselor meets with each participant to discuss his/her lifestyle and how these controllable risk factors can be lowered. The counselor will also discuss permanent risk factors such as age, sex, heredity and race and how these effect the individual.

To take the first step in lowering your risk, call 657-3910, ext. 567 to pre-register. Testing and counseling will be conducted on the following dates: Blood testing on Thursday, Sept. 12 from 7 a.m. to 10 a.m.

Counseling on Wednesday, Sept. 18 from noon to 8 p.m.

There is a $30 fee to cover laboratory services (usually billed at $71). A 12 hour fast is required prior to blood test.

Fall schedule at Tewksbury Baptist Church

The First Baptist Church of Tewksbury has announced the new fall schedule for worship services and church school. These new times begin Sunday, September 15, Rally Day for the church. Worship for all ages begins at 10:30 a.m. Children who will go to Sunday School attend the first 15 minutes and will be dismissed to classes after the children's story at 10:45, with their teachers. Classes are planned for ages four through sixth grade with registration on Rally Day.

The Rev. Thomas Rice, pastor, begins a series of messages on caring and growing. This is in keeping with American Baptist Churches' emphasis "Grow by Caring." The choir will also begin the season of traditional, classical and contemporary music on September 15.

Visitors and new residents of the area are always warmly received. Children and young people are also urged to attend. The church is located at 1500 Andover St. (Route 133), near the north end of North Street, across from the Red School House and Dewing Elementary School. For more information, call the church office at 851-6576. All are welcome to join.

Letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

Currently I am a freshman attending North Adams State College. On August 30 my family gave me a surprise going away party. My sister Diana arranged the party by inviting about 30 of my closest friends over to say "good-bye." During the party we all tried to remember all of the good times that we have shared together over the years. When it was time for them to leave, I told them to say "see you later" rather than saying "goodbye" because it wasn't the end.

I would like to personally thank all of my wonderful friends who attended the party to wish me good luck in all of my college endeavors. I would especially like to thank my family for thinking of me. I miss everyone very much and can't wait to see them all again.

Thank you,
Donna Murray

Antonelli's film on Kerouac premieres Friday in Lowell

John Antonelli, a former Tewksbury resident, has directed and co-written the first biographical film about Lowell-born author Jack Kerouac. The film will have its New England premier at Liberty Hall in Lowell Memorial Auditorium on Friday, Sept. 13. The film entitled "Kerouac" traces the writer's life from his childhood in Lowell through his years on the road. The Merrimack Repertory Theatre (MRT) will present three showings of the film, 5:30, 7:30 and 9:30 p.m. Tickets are $4.00 and may be reserved by calling MRT at 454-3926.

Kerouac, best known as the author of "On the Road", wrote a dozen novels, including several Lowell-based books: "The Town and the City", "Maggie Cassidy", "Dr. Sax", "Visions of Gerard", and "Vanity of Duluz". Since his death in 1969, five full-length biographies have been published. His books remain in print and continue to sell throughout the world.

John Antonelli who grew up in the Lowell-Tewksbury area, spent more than three years creating a film that combines documentary footage of Kerouac, interviews with members of his literary generation such as Allen Ginsberg and John Clellon Holmes, and staged scenes with actor Jack Coulter as Kerouac.

The movie has been praised in film festivals around the country. The Denver Post wrote: "Four stars for Kerouac fans, three for anybody else." The L.A. Times called it "fascinating," and the San Francisco Chronicle reported that the film was a "discovery of the Mill Valley (California) Festival." Antonelli lives in Mill Valley with his wife and daughter.

A portion of the movie was filmed in Lowell and features an interview with the Rev. Armand Morrisette, who knew Kerouac as a young man. Other parts of the film were shot in Colorado and California. Kerouac is also featured in a TV appearance on the Steve Allen show.

Antonelli raised $80,000 to produce "Kerouac." In addition to funds from private investors, he received grants from the California Council for the Humanities, the Massachusetts Foundation for the Humanities, and the Lowell Historic Preservation commission. As he has done at previous showings around the country, Antonelli will speak briefly and answer questions following each presentation of the film.

Tewksbury accepting Art Lottery funding requests

The Tewksbury Arts Lottery Council is now receiving applications for local arts related project funding. The funding will come when the town receives its share of the $1.5 million the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council will distribute in January, 1986 to local arts councils across the state.

Chairperson, Karen Gange of the Tewksbury Arts Lottery Program declared, "The grass roots support of the Arts Lottery Program has increased the general public's awareness of the arts and has offered an essential and unique dimension to our lives. The Tewksbury Arts Lottery Council has been able to support community artistic and cultural activities, many of which could not be funded by other sources. We are proud to be able to encourage artists and to develop new audiences."

Applications for the Arts Lottery Funds are now available in the Tewksbury Town Hall at the Town Clerk's Office. The Town Hall is located in Tewksbury Center adjacent to the common. Applications must be completed and returned by October 1, 1985 in order to be considered for funding. For further information contact the Tewksbury Arts Lottery Council through the Town Hall at 851-2383.

St. Robert's anniversary

Saint Robert's Parish will begin to commemorate its silver anniversary with a week of Christian Renewal from September 16-20. Saint Robert Bellarmine Parish was established in 1960-61 to serve West Andover and North Tewksbury for the Catholic Archdiocese of Boston and has since grown to nearly 900 families.

Appropriately, the opening event of the 25th anniversary celebration is a spiritual renewal. Father Emery Tang, noted Franciscan preacher from Juniper Serra Retreat in California, will visit Saint Robert's to lead the September 16-20 activities. Each morning at nine o'clock, Father Tang will celebrate mass and preach briefly on the day's topic. Each evening at 7:30 p.m., he will fully present one of the five topics of conversation entitled "Let's Talk" about God, Ourselves, Others, Enemies, and Our World's Future.

Father Emery Richard Tang is a Franciscan priest of Chinese American ancestry, born in Phoenix, Arizona. Ordained in 1952, he was a teacher and principal of two high schools in Northern California. Then for 10 years he was a producer for TeleKETICS and TeleSPOTS at the Franciscan Communications Center, Los Angeles. For the past several years he has served at the Malibu retreat House and given many retreats and lectures at large. (He led a very successful parish mission eight years ago at Saint William's Church in Tewksbury).

Course on separation and divorce

The Wilmington Family Counseling Service and the Wilmington Community Schools are again cooperating to offer a course for separated and divorced people, but with a different focus than the courses offered last winter. This course is entitled, "Life After Separation and Divorce: Overcoming Losses and Meeting New Challenges."

Separation and divorce are a very stressful process for anyone to undergo. Letting go of a marriage means going through a transformation of one's lifestyle, facing feelings of loss and perhaps, failure, abandoning dreams of what life could have been. At the same time, one is faced with new prospects which may seem more threatening than exciting. For one thing, one needs to develop an identity as a single person. The experience of being single now may be very different from the experience one had prior to marriage. These and other changes may stir up value conflicts. In the process of becoming more comfortable with these new roles and experiences it often is helpful to share with others who are going through similar circumstances and to learn about oneself in a supportive group environment.

The group will meet Wednesdays, 7:30 to 9 p.m. at the Wilmington Family Counseling Service's new offices - suite 103, 314 Main St., Wilmington. It will be lead by Robert Harl, Ph.D., a licensed psychologist on the staff of the Wilmington Family Counseling Service. The group begins October 2 and will be limited to 12 participants. The fee is $55 for eight weeks. Prior registration is required by calling the Community Schools at 658-8592 or 658-3205 from September 10-13 or by calling the WFCS at 658-9889 from September 23-27.

Two courses in the arts for youngsters will be offered in Wilmington this fall, as creative Arts for Kids, Team and Adults (CAK) extends its program from

Arts program for kids

Reading into Wilmington. The courses in Discovering Art and Puppet Production will be offered Tuesday afternoons at the Woburn Street School beginning October 1.

Founded in 1977, the program is intended to provide additional arts experience to augment school art and music programs. The Reading group has helped start arts programs in four other communities. Several Wilmington families have participated in the Reading program, which led to the start of the new program at the Woburn Street School. Coordinator for the Wilmington program is Bobbie Marino.

The courses will run for eight weeks from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. with an average class size of eight to 12 students. The course fee is $36.

For the kindergarten through grade two child, a Discovering Art course will be offered. Peggy Marrano, a graduate of Wheelock College with a masters of science in education, will be teaching this class. Peggy has taught kindergarten in Wilmington for seven years, planned and implemented a curriculum for Head Start in Wilmington, conducted a story hour at the Wilmington Library and is presently teaching at the Woburn YMCA. She is director of the Babysitters Coop in Wilmington.

In Discovering Art the children will experience many different types of art media; projects will include magic painting, sponge painting, finger painting, weaving, print making, masks, making binoculars, stained glass windows and more. Also included will be songs, games and stories. There is much to discover in the world of the arts.

Puppet Production for kids in grades three through five, will be taught by puppeteer Barbara Fay Weise. Barbara graduated from the University of Wisconsin in Art and Education. She has taught art in Wisconsin, Arizona and Boston and has worked with Streetfeet Workshops, constructing giant puppets for theater productions and was the manager of Streetfeet Women's Touring Co. Her nine-foot tall three-person puppet, "The Troll of D Street" was featured in a puppet parade at Lafayette Place during their recent week long puppetry celebration. Currently she is the secretary of the Boston Area Guild of Puppetry and a professional puppeteer who performs for birthday parties and other events.

Creative Arts for Kids, Inc. was started in 1977 by a group of parents, with the cooperation and help of the Reading School Department, parents, teachers and administrators.

In eight years CAK has grown in many ways. The program began with four courses in two schools with an enrollment of 150. Over the years CAK has served over 1500 families from pre-school into high school and from many communities outside of Reading. Today 40 art courses in the six sites are offered. Students' work is exhibited throughout the year.

The music part of the program began in 1978 with 20 Suzuki students. Today CAK offers a mini-conservatory approach with lessons in strings (traditional and Suzuki) woodwinds, brass, percussion, piano, a beginning orchestra, an orchestra, chamber group and ensembles. CAK enrolled over 200 music students last year.

Music students have been groomed and accepted into Junior District, Greater Boston Youth Symphony Orchestra, AIM Orchestra, Reading Symphony and others. CAK also brings talented people into the area to perform and takes children to museums, art exhibits, and symphony performances outside the community. The CAK Orchestra, Chamber Ensemble and/or Suzuki groups have performed on Channel 5 tv, Quincy Market, Lord & Taylor, Digital, Children's Museum, Suzuki Institutes and more.

CAK provides classes for all kids, teens and adults from all communities in drama, puppetry, dance, woodworking, nature, painting, clowning, theater, drawing, stenciling, fly tying, quilting and more. The music program provides lessons in all instruments along with the ensembles, chamber groups and orchestras.

Registration for courses in Wilmington and the art and music program in Reading began Sept. 9. Course flyers will be distributed through the elementary schools and may be obtained at the library. Call the CAK office for more information at 942-0538.

Favored Redmen open with Wildcats

The 1985 Tewksbury varsity soccer team begins its 10th season today (Sept. 11) as host to rival Wilmington at the Tewksbury Memorial High School track and field complex for a 3:30 p.m. game. All varsity games at home will be played at the track and field complex, with Saturday morning games beginning at 10 a.m. Times for the junior varsity games will be the same as those of the varsity team. On Saturday, September 14, Tewksbury will host large school opponent Chelmsford at 10 a.m.

The Merrimack Valley Soccer League will be set up as last year, two divisions, a large and a small school, with the champions of each continuing their season into the Eastern Massachusetts State Tournament. Each game played, whether it be a large or a small school opponent, will count in the individual schools divisional race.

Two points are awarded for each win; one point awarded for a tie; none for a loss. The team in each division with the most points at the end of their 18 game season will be the divisional champion. The large school division consists of defending champion Andover, Billerica, Chelmsford, Haverhill and Lowell. The small school division includes defending champion Tewksbury; Wilmington, Methuen, Lawrence (has no JV team), and league newcomer Dracut.

All varsity games will include two 40 minute halves, with a 10 minute halftime. Junior varsity games will be divided into two 36 minute halves, with a five minute halftime. The state tournament at the end of the season will also include any teams that win 59 percent of their points during the regular season. This means that since a season includes 18 games with a possibility of two points a

The junior varsity team is coached by Robert Manzi.

The Tewksbury varsity also includes a student assistant coach, senior Matt Grund.

Auto women capture title

After finishing the past two seasons as runners-up in the Northwest Suburban Softball League, the Towne Auto Women's team recently captured its first championship trophy. It was a combination of outstanding defense and a strong offensive punch that brought Towne to the title.

Towne was led by pitcher Hilary Bradshaw of Weston, who went the distance in all of Towne's victories. The toughest victory, but by far the most memorable, was Towne's victory over the Massachusetts State Championship team, the Lowell Spacshots in extra innings, 8-7.

It was in that game Towne put it all together in an impressive display of teamwork. Missy Riddle (Keene State) and Bonnie Staniewicz (Westfield State), both former all-conference players at TMHS, were the stars, scoring the tying and go-ahead runs in a victory that was memorable to say the least.

Towne went on to finish off the Blazers in the final championship game, 8-5.

Leading Towne through the playoffs was Maria Montuori (Boston College triple crown winner), who went 11 for 13 with two homeruns, three triples, four doubles and eight RBIs.

Following Maria in the lineup was All American at Springfield College Kathy Mangano, who played firstbase and batted .564 through the summer season.

Defensive standouts for Towne were Helene Scott (Springfield), Ann Scannel (Harvard) and Kelly Gately (Harvard) centerfield. With a supporting cast that boasted Linda Barry (TMHS All Conference), Tricia Guanci (St. Anslem's) and player coach Donna Tanner, the Towne team took the league championship in style.

Without the support sponsor Ray Patterson, the Towne women's softball team would never have accomplished all they have over the years.

Prince William roams in Tewksbury

A truly American ancestor

By JIM ROUILLARD

Like most royalty, Prince William of Tewksbury WILL be monarch of all he surveys — even if it means stomping a few geese in the process.

Known to intimates as Willy, Prince William is a full-blooded American bison, often misnamed buffalo, and his forebears came to this continent by the Bering Strait land bridge, sometime before the Cabots and the Lodges.

The 13-month-old bison's American roots, in fact, stretch back to the Pleistocene period.

But he's down-to-earth nonetheless, with no airs beyond "essence of Willy," which his owner, Tony Martinelli, thinks might set a new fertilizer fashion.

"People are wild now to have mesquite wood to burn in their fireplaces," Martinelli said.

"Why not essence of Willy in their flowerpots?"

Prince William's present domain encompasses an approximate quarter-acre enclosure, with fence in place of castle walls, an enormous high-tension wire stanchion for jousting-post, a mini-mountain instead of a turret, and an inner keep, called a pentahouse, with wooden "starplates" for walls and roof, and five skylights.

A shaggy, curly-haired, energetic animal, the purebred member of the species "Bison bison," is a bare 13 months old. But Willy is no puny princeling by any measure. He has already passed the three-hundred-pound mark, well on his way to a full-weight potential of not quite a ton and a half.

The handsome young beast owes his name, said his owner, to a certain fancied resemblance to musical rock star Prince, and to the natural association of bison with America's Wild West and Buffalo Bill, William F. Cody — who derived his own nickname from his skill at hunting the bison (Cody's record entailed the slaughter of 4,862 of the animals in one season — 69 in one day, according to historians) and helping to bring it to near extinction. But the breed, protected by the government, has made a good comeback, Martinelli said.

Martinelli confesses himself, by the way, slightly jealous of blance to musical rock star Prince, and to the natural association of bison with America's Wild West and Buffalo Bill, William F. Cody — who derived his own nickname from his skill at hunting the bison (Cody's record entailed the slaughter of 4,862 of the animals in one season — 69 in one day, according to historians) and helping to bring it to near extinction. But the breed, protected by the government, has made a good comeback, Martinelli said.

The fast world of T.V.

If you've got a product to sell commercials on television seem to be the way to go these days. Nowhere else is the competition for consumers' dollars sharper than in the high-rolling, fastpitch world of tv advertising.

The recent Coca Cola - Pepsi Cola war to be the number one cola company is a prime example of how intense a tv commercial campaign can be. Just when Pepsi thought it had taken over first place after Coke had seemingly and foolishly decided to switch its formula to taste like Pepsi's, Coke comes back with an ad blitz exclaiming that the old coke was back in addition to the new coke and that now they have two flavors of coke. Coke appeared to have planned that move all along.

It was the advertising coup of the decade. Coke was now claiming they had never relinquished the number one spot, and in fact, they were stronger than ever.

That is tv advertising on the national level. There's also another side to the high-pressure television commercial world, a side reserved for Joe Shmoe, owner of Shmoe's Discount Shoe Store down the street aways, who gets on local tv to hawk his goods. Often times it

Catholic Family Services celebrates 65th year

Helping families to cope

By DAVID WELDON

READING — As social pressures and family problems take a rising toll on many adults, teenagers and children, the need for professional counseling and social services in the area has risen dramatically.

Several agencies exist in the Greater Boston area to help residents cope with a variety of problems, but in many cases these agencies have not been able to hook-up with the people that need their services the most.

Recent incidents and media attention have changed that picture somewhat, however, most noticeably the issues of day care center licensing, and those of sexual abuse and domestic violence.

Most importantly, more people who need such services are becoming aware of where they can turn to for help, counseling and referral.

One of the largest such agencies is celebrating its 65th anniversary this year, and has taken the occasion to better notify the surrounding communities of the professional services it offers.

That agency is Catholic Family Services, a non-sectarian, non-profit, social service agency that serves the communities of Reading, Wakefield, Saugus, Melrose, Lynnfield, Stoneham, North Reading, Lynn, Nahant and Swampscott.

While headquartered in Lynn, Catholic Family Services also operates a branch in Reading Center, which offers the full range of counseling services offered at the larger Lynn center.

Founded in 1919, Catholic Family Services serves "to provide comprehensive services to adults and children that promote independent, autonomous functioning. We offer our clients counseling, education and concrete support services, using an individual, group or family approach," according to an agency spokesman. While affiliated with the Archdiocese of Boston, Catholic Family Services is by no means limited to members of the Catholic faith. Instead, its services are geared toward aiding with social and family problems, and it welcomes clients from all sectors.

Housing

homes. Naturally some of the people are annoyed.

In Nutting's eyes the solution was to lower the water level, where Martin's Brook flows under Salem Street (Route 62) in North Wilmington.

It is very doubtful, that the Wilmington water commissioners would agree. The principal water source of water for Wilmington comes from the Brown's Crossing pumping station, just a little northerly of and upstream from the Salem Street bridge. About half the town's water supply comes from that well field.

There is a dam, just downstream from Salem Street, called the Nod Mill Dam. It dates from 1695, when a mill was erected there. The old Yankee mills had special flooding rights, to "back-up" their water supplies. Fields upstream could be flooded until April 15, even if owned by another person.

The Wilmington Water Department brought the Browns Crossing area, and the mill-right to Nod Pond Dam, from Maria Brown Hathaway, back about 1925. Then, to reinforce their rights to the dam, there was a special act of the legislature, allowing the water department to flood the upstream areas. Engineers calculated the elevation of the dam very carefully, and that description has been strictly adhered to ever since.

Then, about 1928, there was a lawsuit. A North Reading resident named Flint claimed his farmland was being wrongfully flooded. Wilmington's town counsel, a young man named Phillip Buzzell, won that case.

Raising the water level in the spring not only helps recharge the aquifer that supplies Wilmington (and possibly North Reading) but also increases the pressure to the wells, so that the water is easier to pump. Thus the flooding results in an energy savings for Wilmington.

To think the water commissioners would consent to lowering the level of the water is out of this world.

Nutting told the WHA that there had been discussion about raising the road in North Reading. That, he said, would possibly endanger some of the homes in the area.

Danny Gillis of the WHA observed that the problems about water would have to be solved by the water commissioners, and not the WHA.

The third item in Nutting's agenda was snow plowing.

The North Reading Department of Public Works, he said, does a substantial job of snow plowing in the Lost Colony area, each winter, both plowing and sanding. Each snowstorm means two to three hours work.

The director of the North Reading DPW, Nutting said, feels that Wilmington should pay $1200 a year for that service.

Chairman McMillan countered that the residents in the area beyond the Lost Colony, Lakeside Boulevard are benefited by the plowing. They have to go through 700 to 800 feet of Wilmington to get to their homes. McMillan understood that the particular area of which they were speaking is the most densely populated part, around Martins Pond. He had been told there were 260 homes in that section.

Nutting agreed that was a part of the overall problem, and then pointed out that Wilmington plows a bit of North Reading, too, naming a part of Fordham Road and another street. The identity of the second street was not clear.

How many houses?

How many houses will the WHA want to construct was the big question. Architect D. Michael Hick of Boston took a part in the discussion.

McMillan, speaking for the WHA, thought there should be no more than four homes built in the Lost Colony, maybe three. A. Daniel Gillis, who does not want more than three, gave a brief history of what he called "the three year war" and why Wilmington cannot build duplex houses.

Lillian Buckley, executive director, said the state wants seven homes in the area, but she told the WHA, after it had become apparent that there were problems, the state had backed down.

The architect, in answer to a question, said he hopes to have the basic decision made some time this week. In a few months, he hopes, construction will start on three or four homes in the area.

Gillis related that a North Reading man named Piscatelli had told him that "We are not against low income housing. We just don't want any housing." The selectmen of North Reading, Gillis said, have an attitude of "We're against any building in the area."

Nutting was optimistic. Get the water problem straightened out, he said, and tell the selectmen (of North Reading) that there will be no more than four homes in the area.

Lillian Buckley remarked that there was a "change of attitude." "No" said Nutting. "It is just that I am a realist. You have told me of no more sites in Wilmington."

"Exactly right!" Gillis said. Everything being decided on, Nutting does not want to delay the housing construction program. McMillan said that, basically, the construction will be "pre-fab." The architect added that a shell can "go up in a weekend."

McMillan: "We have been through 18 months of negotiation, and committee, and town meetings."

Nutting: The North Reading selectmen asked me to negotiate. I now can only recommend to them.

He left at 8:20 p.m. after which Hick spoke up to say that the satte housing is in agreement with many of the remarks that Nutting had made. "Whatever this board decides, the state will support."

Tennis court tour

Parents concerned about playground

Parents of children at Wilmington's Shawheen School have raised the issue of safety with regard to the area where children play before school and during recess periods. A group of parents has gone before the school committee and the selectmen seeking to have the school's play area changed from the tennis courts to the adjacent playing field.

School committee members were summoned to the school for an inspection of the tennis courts on Wednesday evening last week. The area had been cleaned of broken glass, but parents were concerned about several holes, designed to hold posts for tennis nets, and a large block of concrete near the gate. The holes were large enough for a child's foot to slip into.

The children are playing in the tennis court on direction of Dr. Charles Toomey, principal of the school. The rationale for the use of the tennis court is that it is fenced in, providing safety from cars.

The town has spent about $60,000 on the school property this year, including new paving in the parking lot and a double gate at the front of the driveway to prevent cars from cutting through the yard.

The school children were first restricted to the tennis court at the end of the end of the 1983-84 school year, when the school's septic system was failing. At that time, raw sewage was spilling into the parking lot, making it unfit as a play area.

The parents are now asking why, with the septic system replaced and the parking lot paved, are the children still in the tennis court?

To make the issue more confusing, the responsibility for the care of the tennis court comes under the town manager and the Dept. of Public Works, while the assignment of a play area comes under the School Department.

Supt. of Public Works Robert Palmer has given the tennis court considerable attention. But the task of keeping the area clear of broken glass is not a simple one. Glass breakage from people throwing bottles is a continuous problem.

On Monday night, several parents, along with Phil Fenton of the school committee, asked the selectmen to close the tennis court. Fenton has two children who attend the school.

After learning that other parents have aligned themselves with Dr. Toomey, selectmen declined to take action to close the tennis court, but pledged to visit the school the following day and take proper action if the tennis court were unsafe.

"If we start acting on individual requests," said Selectman Bob Cain, "we are making a policy change. That has to come from the school committee."

The parents were also concerned about the location at which school buses were unloading the students.

The matter will be taken up by the school committee Wednesday night

Medicare-Medicaid

At the age of 65 a senior citizen medical coverage can be either Medicare or Medicaid. The difference between the words is not only the spelling. Any Medicare has two parts A and B. A is hospital insurance and is given to the Social Security recipient free. B covers doctors' bills and has to be paid for at $15.50 a month which is taken out of the Social Security check before it is received.

Medicaid is under the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. It provides complete health benefits for those seniors who meet income and assets guidelines. If you receive a S.S.I. check you automatically receive Medicaid, but even if you do not receive an SSI check you may still qualify for Medicaid. Recently the income level has been raised to one person $440 and two, $484 a month. Those who feel they may qualify should call the welfare office in Woburn or the Center for more information.

NECRT conference Sept. 12-14

BURLINGTON — The 27th annual New England Conference of Radiologic Technologists will be held this year at the Burlington Marriott Hotel in Burlington, on Sept. 12, 13, and 14.

The NECRT is represented by over 9,000 technologists in the New England states. These individuals are vital to the health care team and to the people of New England.

Gov. Michael Dukakis of Massachusetts has proclaimed the days of this year's conference as Radiologic Technologist Days. We would appreciate the publication of the governor's statement.

The general public has very little knowledge of just how extensive and ongoing our training is. During the course of a year, an extremely high percentage of the population receives X-Rays, ultra-sound exams, or radiation therapy, for a multitude of reasons.

Nutrition, elderly diseases linked

Better understanding of human nutritional needs could lead to a substantial reduction in the incidence of heart disease, cancer and other major problems afflicting the aged.

In an overview on nutrition and the aging process published this month by the Nutritional Information Bureau, a service sponsored by BASF Wyandotte Corporation, the Bureau observes:

"Clearly, authorities in both cancer and heart research believe nutritional factors directly affect one's risk of contracting these major diseases in later life."

To combat the enormous toll of osteoporosis, a calcium deficiency that often results in fatal hip and other fractures in the aged, the Bureau notes that substantially higher dietary calcium intake is recommended by health authorities, especially for women.

Dr. Robert B. McGandy, professor of nutrition at the Human Nutrition Research Center on Aging at Tufts University, states in the overview:

"Calcium is one nutrient of which very few elderly Americans get even the current Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA). The use of milk and dairy products, which are the primary sources of calcium in this country, has declined, very likely because people are trying to reduce their intakes of saturated fats and cholesterol."

While cautioning older people against taking megadoses of nutrient supplements, Dr. McGandy notes that a reasonable supplement, "which amounts to the recommended adult daily requirement of vitamins and minerals," may make sense as food intake is reduced. "This, of course, assuming that today's RDA standards are appropriate for the elderly," he adds.

The Bureau notes that while the changes in eating habits currently being called for by cancer and heart disease authorities are somewhat different in emphasis, they are not incompatible.

"It is possible, therefore, to choose a diet to reduce risks both of cancer and heart disease, and to add in osteoporosis prevention for good measure," the overview states.

Especially important for the elderly, the Bureau concludes, is the problem of food-drug interaction. The overview explains:

"Older people take more daily medications, some as many as six prescription drugs every day. Many drugs and nutrients interact in the body and may cause dangerous side effects or may cancel or intensify each other's action."

The bottom line, notes the overview, is that elderly patients should make a point of learning from their doctor which foods should be avoided due to the prescription - and non-prescription - drugs they might be taking.

Groundnuts are great!

One of the world's most nutritious root crops is perhaps this country's best kept secret. National Wildlife magazine says groundnuts, about the size of golf balls, are as tasty as potatoes and have four times the protein. They were not always unwanted and forgotten, however. The Pilgrims may not have survived their first winter without these nutritious nuts. And now, after some 300 years, scientists are trying to make this wild vine vegetable a household word, that may one day compete with potatoes.

American ancestor

his cloven-hoofed pet. "I feel a little slighted sometimes," he said. "People pull into the driveway to see Willy; they don't come to see me."

But Willy is, after all, quite a draw.

Raised in Virginia, he was found last winter in Leominster, by Martinelli's brother, Jim, and partner, Paul Thornblad, who knew that Tony had always wanted a bison.

"Hey, come on out and give me a hand with my van," Jim Martinelli said to his brother last Christmas. "I can't figure out what's wrong with it."

Inside the carpeted van was Willy, three months old, and irresistible, gift-wrapped with a single red bow around one of his cone-shaped horns.

That was Willy's introduction to MT Greenhouses, major wholesale suppliers of dish gardens to New England, which Tony Martinelli and Paul Thornblad own and run from their Pine Street-based acreage. If you've bought a dish garden at Boston's Faneuil Hall, a local greenhouse, or one of many area or New England hospitals, chances are it came from Martinelli's and Thornblad's Tewksbury facility.

"Willy was three months old when we got him, and lived in the packing room until spring," Martinelli explained. "He was shy at first, but seems to have calmed down, and got used to the noise of traffic and people coming and going."

Yet Willy is only the heaviest animal among many on the MT residential.

On arrival, the little bison created an instant sensation in the neighborhood. Martinelli said, among the neighbors who already loved the five geese: two white Chinese Weeders (Yin and Yang), three gray Africans (Rhett, Ashley and Prissy), three peacocks (Fred and Lucy, with unnamed, fresh-hatched peachick and the thieving, nameless mole who shares the birds' quarters and robs their food), the camera-clicking cat (Jack), two mongrel dogs (Pokey and Peaches) and 54 chickens, only one of whom (Petunia) is named.

Of course Prince William is the natural monarch in this bestiary, by virtue of his size and beauty. But his sway wasn't always undisputed. When his enclosure was first built, and Willy had graduated from a steel cable lead fixed to a giant upside-down flowerpot anchored with concrete — one of the geese had a clutch of eggs, Martinelli said, and the bird managed to back the bison down.

But, finally, Willy decided he'd had enough of that nonsense, according to Martinelli. Geese are notorious bullies, he said, and "I'm glad some animal finally decided to give those birds a hard time."

The hard time consists, merely, of showing the birds who's boss, by charging them occasionally — which Martinelli asked Willy to do once or twice, when the five fowl started to squawk and eye free-lance photographer Steve Maher of Wakefield, in possible preparation for attack.

"Geese have the popular reputation of being rather stupid," according to Charles Vaurie of the American Museum of Natural History, "but this is misleading. Wild geese are resourceful, and brave in the face of danger, and most species are considered by ornithologists above the average in intelligence as far as birds go."

And don't sell the noisy fowl short. "A famous legend," Vaurie continues, "tells how the honking of geese saved the Roman Capitol by giving the alarm during a night raid by the Gauls in 390 B.C."

But when Martinelli called on Willy to charge his geese, and relieve the threat of attack on photographer Maher, the five birds showed the wisdom of cowardice and fled in a loud, raucous body.

It was Steve Maher, also, who unwittingly invited the attention of the cat Jack, which kept trying to take his photos for him. Maher had laid down his camera briefly, and the cat was promptly upon it, ready to snap a few frames. "You have to be very rude to that cat," Martinelli said. "Like flinging him away from you."

It worked. Unharmed but offended, Jack stalked off with just one contemptuous look at my small Polaroid sun camera.

Though little more than a year old, Willy is already beginning to grow a beard, and he likes to be groomed, especially with an Afro-pic on his tight head-curls, by chief bison-babysitter and groomer Becky Thornblad. After it rains, Martinelli said, "All Willy's hairs curl, and he really looks beautiful." Yet he looked beautiful, even dry, to us.

"How much of the wild bison do you see in Willy," asked Steve Maher.

"A little," Martinelli said. "Now here's a little rubbing game (Willy was firmly butting Martinelli's knees and thighs) which I'd be concerned about when Willy reaches 1500 pounds and his hormones have come into play."

"When will he be sexually mature?"

"At age three — and he'll reach his full weight by age five."

Willy was less than a year old the one time he got loose, Martinelli said, and the bison managed to elude several of Tewksbury's finest: "A knock came on the Pine Street door at 10 one night. The policeman on the front step asked in wearied tone: 'Is this where the buffalo lives?'"

Willy had somehow pulled freed from his giant, concrete-filled flowerpot, crossed Whipple Street and, dragging a length of steel cable, wandered into the grounds of the Department of Public Works garage which is located there.

Martinelli accompanied the police officer to the site, and found several of the man's colleagues surrounding Willy, without being able to get a hold on him.

"He was really frightened," Martinelli said. "And every time I got near him the police radio would let out a static squawk, which would send him scurrying away from me. Neither of our night vision is good, and I was afraid of breaking a leg, my own, or Willy's."

"I asked the police to turn off the radio, and Willy started to side away from me once again, when I called to him. He gave me the funniest look when he heard my voice, and then came straight to me."

"The police said there was no way they would carry him back home in the cruiser — and I can't blame them — so I walked him home on his lead."

RIDING THE DOMESTIC BISON, owner Tony Martinelli of Tewksbury said the 13-month-old Willy outweighs him by about two-to-one. Martinelli wants to train Willy for riding — but does it gently for the time being, since he doesn't want to make the 300-pound-plus baby "prematurely swaybacked."

Willy's current enclosure will grow as Willy grows, along with the strength of the fence around it, Martinelli said. Present plans include procuring a baby female "Bison bison" for Willy, within the next year or so, and raising her as Willy has been raised, to be comfortable around people and within earshot of traffic.

Willy, by the way, is considerably smarter than any bird, goose or otherwise. His owner tacked up a chart which outlines all the cuts of cattle, from rib roast to oxtail. Willy promptly ate the chart, and today casts a baleful eye on anyone who mentions the high cost of bison meat.

"Let's see," joked Martinelli. "Just 1500 pounds at $8 a pound is a lot of money on the hoof."

"But I could never even consider it," he hastily added as photographer, writer and Willy prepared to attack.

The gaggle of five geese made impolite noise in the background, like a jeering Greek chorus. And though the object of their sympathy may have been uncertain, I think it's safe to say that it wasn't Prince William.

There's a big difference between a fix...

Sometimes all you really need is a good doctor at a store front clinic. He doesn't need much back-up to take care of your sprained ankle or strep throat.

Sometimes it's not that simple. Symptoms are severe and recurrent. Mysterious or alarming. That's when you need a lot more than a good doctor.

That's when you look to a doctor who is backed up by extensive treatment capabilities. When you look to an entire multi-disciplinary medical team, with special, sophisticated equipment at their command. When you look to consultants in specialties and sub-specialties standing by.

That's when you look to the Family Care Center at New England Memorial Hospital and the local private doctors who are affiliated here. That's when you look to a team that has a stake in the community and a commitment to the people who live here.

And that's when you look to Bay State for complete coverage of emergency or routine hospital care, as well as the services of associated private doctors.

Bay State Health Care is the fastest-growing IPA health maintenance organization in New England, with more than 120,000 members and 2,800 associated private physicians, specialists and dentists.

Bay State, The New England Memorial Hospital Family Care Center and the local private doctors are the team you can count on when you need more than a simple fix.

For more information about services and capabilities, call the hospital. If you're interested in becoming a Bay State member, ask about it at work. Or call 868-7000.

The program, open to boys and girls in grades three through eight from Woburn, Wilmington, and surrounding communities, will cover all aspects of theatre in a learn-by-doing format. The Workshop will culminate in a full production by the students of the musical Scrooge in December.

In classes taught by professional educators and theatrical artists, youngsters will be introduced to a variety of theatre experiences (vocal technique, dance, acting concepts, costume and makeup design, publicity, properties, set design and construction). Every student will be involved, both on-stage and backstage, in the musical play which will complete the Workshop with performances on Saturday and Sunday, December 14 and 15.

Registration for the workshop will take place on Saturday, September 14, from 10 a.m. to 12 noon at the Joyce Junior High School, Locust Street, Woburn (where the workshop sessions will be held beginning Saturday, October 5 from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. for ten consecutive Saturdays).

Students who wish to enroll in the Young People's Theatre Workshop must attend the registration on the 14th, accompanied by a parent or adult guardian. A non-refundable $75 fee for the workshop is payable at that time.

ABC program welcomes adults to college

By PENNY RICHARDS

Middlesex Community College in Bedford has always welcomed students of all ages, but a program at the college specifically aimed at the older, returning student, is gaining attention.

Middlesex offers a program through its special services division called ABC, "Adults Begin College," during both day and evening seminars. It is a multi-session seminar aimed at tearing down barriers, real or imagined, that keep adults away from college.

The opening session includes a meeting with adults who are either presently enrolled at Middlesex, or who have attended the school as adults. All have very upbeat and positive stories to tell of their college experience as adults.

These folks aid in breaking down the first obstacle that most attendees encounter and are reflected by statements like, "I can't do this. I'm too old and I'd just be wasting my time. There's nothing I can learn and no one can change my mind."

But this internal turmoil vanishes in nearly every case during this first brief session, and attendees suddenly realize that there just might be room in their lives for the college experience, seminar organizers say.

Stan Hitron, director of special services for Middlesex, fashioned the ABC program after a similar program run at

AMI of Eastern Middlesex to meet Sept. 11

The Alliance for the Mentally Ill of Eastern Middlesex will resume regular meetings on the first and third Wednesdays of each month at Our Place, 38 Pleasant St., Stoneham.

The first meeting of this new season will be Sept. 11 at 7:30 p.m. This is for "caring and sharing" - a round table discussion of individual problems and how they have been handled which might be helpful to others in similar situations. There is usually a speaker at the second meeting of the month. There is no admission charge and all are welcome. The AMI of Eastern Middlesex is a local non-profit group for residents of Melrose, Wakefield, Stoneham, Reading and North Reading who have a family member or friend with mental illness, and who are concerned over services, or lack of services, for the mentally ill in this five community area. The main objective of the AMI on all levels - local, state and national - is improvement of services to better meet the needs of the mentally ill.

If you have any questions, call Eileen Trainor, 665-0737.

Mount Wachusett Community College in Gardner. The ABC program began in the spring of 1983 with immediate positive results for the college. Of the people attending ABC over the past two years, 75 percent have gone on to attend college and 85 percent of these have become Middlesex students. Many begin attending college on a part-time basis, attending evening or weekend classes.

"ABC brings people with similar concerns together; people support one another once they find others in situations like their own," Hitron says.

The program, open to everyone, attracts mostly women with a variety of backgrounds. Many are ready to enter the workforce now that their children have entered school or left home. Others have become single heads of households and are being forced into the workplace. Others have found their previous training inadequate in the market and require new skills and further education. Still others are simply bored and need an outlet for their energies. All have concerns and questions on their abilities to adapt to the college environment as they perceive it and all wonder how they will fit in.

Middlesex's ABC program is the beginning that adults need to give themselves. The program includes sessions on study skills, note- and test-taking (real skills that in many cases must be re-learned); scheduling time to balance work, home, parenting and college responsibilities; career counseling and financial assistance.

Joyce Driscoll of Wakefield was one ABC attendee. A single parent in search of a good job, Joyce inquired into the ABC program, attended the sessions and immediately enrolled at Middlesex. "Middlesex's ABC program gave me the start I needed," Driscoll states with real enthusiasm.

"I met people at the sessions that I later attended classes with. I wasn't alone during those first few days as a student, I already had friends to talk to in the cafeteria, walk to classes with, and share notes and experiences with. The support network we formed among ourselves has been invaluable."

Driscoll also met instructors and college staff personnel through the ABC program, all of whom gave her support and encouragement as she began her college experience.

Driscoll began her Middlesex education as a full-time student and graduated in June with an associate's degree in liberal arts.

"I'll be back in September and will spend this next year completing the requirements for a second degree in the Medical Lab Technician program," she states. She speaks of her accomplishments with pride, and has every right to do so.

Driscoll, along with several other MCC students who went through the ABC program, has been a major factor in forming a student organization called DARTS, "Determined Adults Returning to School." This group combines social, cultural and academic activities that help provide the support mechanism for adults attending Middlesex.

As committee chairperson, Driscoll was instrumental in writing the DARTS charter and drawing up the group budget through the Student Activity Office at Middlesex.

One of the group's social activities was a dinner for members and their families, after which they attended a play at the college.

"The event gave us an opportunity to extend our involvement at Middlesex and through DARTS to our spouses and children, and gave them the chance to share our college experiences with us," Driscoll states.

"All in all, the support doesn't stop after the last ABC session. DARTS continues to provide the outlet I need that was not otherwise available to me as an adult attending college."

While many communities offer adult education courses through local schools, these courses offer no college credit. College-sponsored courses provide credits which are valuable for job enhancement and career mobility. Once earned, college credits remain a part of your permanent record and can be applied toward a degree program at a later point in time.

College credits may also be available for life experience through a program called CLEP. Ask Middlesex's admissions office for more information on CLEP testing.

Middlesex Community College is located in Bedford and has class locations in Acton, Arlington, Burlington, Chelmsford, Lexington, Lowell, Stoneham and Waltham. Free academic counseling and registration will be offered at a variety of locations throughout September.

Call the college at 275-8910 and speak with Stan Hitron to learn more about Middlesex, ABC and DARTS, and how a college education will fit into your life.

Woodchips

By ANTHONY MANCONI

My hobby as a beachcomber is well known. I sometimes get to a beach early enough to see the sun burst over the horizon to give birth to a new day. The gulls cry out like new-born babes as they search for food. The crests of the waves sparkle as they catch the sun's rays. The beach with its crescent-like shape seems to embrace and hold the ocean in its bosom. A sandpiper flits ever so swiftly along the shoreline as the waves break, expand their energy, then slowly retreat back into the waiting arms of the sea. The sun bursts up over the horizon and I thank God, for this new day and hope that in some way Woodchips may bring joy, happiness or even a wee smile to someone, anyone, anywhere today.

While shopping in Reading, Inspector Bobby Lear asked my wife Kathy, who was having a difficult time walking because she had tripped and sprained her ankle during the week, "Do you always walk with a jerk?" Kathy looked at me then turned to Bobby and said, "No, I sometimes walk alone."

Circus Ad; Wanted: human cannonball — must be able to travel." Your're two hours late," said the boss. "I know," replied Frank Guiliano, "I fell down a whole flight of stairs coming to work this morning." "And that took you two hours?" asked the boss.

A visiting Missionary priest asked the pastor of a church, "How are things in your parish?" "Oh I have a 100 percent active congregation," he responded. Then he added "many are active fishermen, active golfers and some others are active bowlers."

The man who brags that he never made a mistake invariably has a wife who did.

This is how my cousin, Maureen O'Donnell of Winchester solved what must be a very difficult problem for many mothers, how to get their children up in the morning to get to school on time. "Oh" Maureen said, "I never have a problem with Tommy. I just toss our cat into bed with him and he gets up right away." "How does that work?" "It's simple," Maureen said, "my son Tommy sleeps with his dog."

If you got up out of bed this morning and dressed-up, put on your shoes, thank God that you did, for that was the start of a good day.

America — home of the homeless from all over the world.

Unless you've dug a bucket of clams, you really don't know what hard work is. Walk a half mile to the flats, dig like mad for "time and tide wait for no man," then stretch fifteen minutes to let your back straighten out, then carry the clams to your car, drive to the drugstore to pick up a bottle of liniment, then home. Lie on the floor for the next two days then get up, cook and enjoy the clams you dug. Now truthfully, isn't it easier to go to "A-I Sea-food" in Wilmington, and buy them?

Woodchips readers know that I hate long winded sermons. I walked in late to church right in the middle of a sermon. I turned and asked a gentleman behind me "how long has he been preaching?" "Oh about 20 years." "In that case I'll stay," I replied, "he must be nearly finished."

My wife Kathy, angrily confronted me as I came back to the table for the fourth time with a generous helping of ice cream and cake at a wedding reception. "What the heck are you doing?" she snapped. "Aren't you embarrassed going back for all that dessert?" "Why should I be?" I exclaimed, "I keep telling them it's for you."

Folks, most of you know me personally as a peace loving man but I don't know what I'd do if I ever met the inventor of the automatic choke, the electric pencil sharpener, the battery powered vacuum cleaner, necklaces for men (one step away from the ZULU warriors), the electric snow shovel, and folks, this really gets my Nanny, those stupid, idiotic blacked out auto windows.

Now to get back to my fun loving self again, ladies, all you have to do to get your husbands started in doing some household chores or garden work is to subtly suggest that maybe they are getting too old to do them. Scott Hamilton, has a neighbor who has eight children. He recently bought a daushand puppy so they can all pet it at the same time.

In a way I'm glad summer vacation time is over, three weeks on the sand and the rest of the year on the rocks.

After a fire and brimstone sermon, my Aunt Maria told Fr. Richard Brady, of St.

Barbara's Church in Woburn, "Father, that was an eloquent, forceful and poignant sermon, everything you said applies to someone I know."

I thank George Ganley of Burlington, former sports writer for the Woburn Times, for a wonderful letter (in rhyme) that he is a Woodchips fan and especially likes my poems.

Flip a switch and a room comes ablaze with light, turn a knob on a kitchen stove and a gas jet comes alive, give a sink faucet a twist of the wrist and cool clear invigorating water gushes out. Now electric light can be substituted with candles, for cooking a woodburning stove has done that for years, but if water is not available then brothers and sisters we are indeed in trouble. "I thought you said that religion is as free as the water we drink?" asked Uncle John Shea of Father Jeremiah Murphy, a distant cousin of ours. "It is free as water," replied the sharp as a whip Father Murphy, "all you're paying for is the Pipin. The butterfly, is a flower with wings."

Years ago the mayor of Woburn gave the Key to the City to my father then called up and had all the locks changed.

For fun and fitness - square dance

The Skirts 'n' Flirts Square Dance Club invites area couples to a free introductory fun nite of dancing at the West Intermediate School, Carter Lane, Wilmington at 8 P.M. on Thursday evenings, Sept. 5, 12 and 19. On Thursday, Sept. 26, regular weekly classes will begin.

Square dancing is an activity that can provide men and women with regular exercise to assist in improving their health and fitness. Rhythmic and continuous exercise that involves a large percentage of the body's musculature is the best way to attain cardiovascular fitness. Square dancing is also a very efficient exercise in terms of toning muscles and giving people a good feeling. In addition, it can assist in a weight loss program. Many studies have shown that exercise is more effective than dieting for losing weight. Health care professionals agree that when reasonable eating habits are combined with exercise, weight loss is more rapid than when dieting or exercise is used alone.

Square dancing is also an activity that can provide an emotional release from tensions and frustration in today's high pressure society. It discourages the competition that is so evident in competitive sports and encourages participation by everyone strictly for pleasure. It requires no special talents or previous dancing ability. It facilitates communication and interaction while generating fun and laughter.

Today it is so easy to sit and watch TV or play computer games devoid of human contact. Couples need to begin a regular program of exercise together. It is the key to getting healthier and staying that way. For further information call 658-4031 or 935-0905.

works in partnership with the Department of Social Services, is a member of the Child Welfare League of America, and is accredited by the Council on Accreditation of Services to Families and Children.

Its programs range from protective service for children at risk of neglect or abuse; foster care in supervised homes; adoption services for children in the agency's care; project PREPARE, providing educational, medical and social services to expectant mothers; the Christ Child Nursery, a non-profit day care center in Lynn; family day care services; counseling for stress, emotional problems, substance abuse, and marital problems or family violence.

According to Catholic Family Services Executive Director Gail Murray, the agency was one of the first to move into the area of family counseling, as well as services such as foster care and economic relief. That transition began in the 1940s, and has continued since then. It was under the administration of President John F. Kennedy "that we started moving heavily into the services we provide now," she explained.

With its 65th birthday this year, Murray explained, the agency is especially trying to promote its Reading office, which primarily serves clients from Reading, Wakefield, Melrose, North Reading and Stoneham, while Lynn handles the others.

The primary difference between the two sites, she said, is that the Reading office (located in the Old South Methodist Church) has a smaller staff, comprised of It's cider time again!

This year, for the first time, cider pressing joins the brilliant foliage and brisk morning air as signs of autumn at Old Sturbridge Village, Sturbridge, Mass. The Cider Mill, Old Sturbridge Village's newest exhibit, will begin crushing and pressing apples on Sept. 28. On weekends from Sept. 28 through Nov. 3, visitors can see the early 19th-century horsepowered mill, which has been moved from Brookfield, N.H. to Old Sturbridge Village, in operation producing traditional New England cider. On weekdays, costumed interpreters will be cleaning the press, sorting apples, and preparing for the next crushing and pressing.

Cider has been a New England favorite for centuries. In the early 19th-century, fermented cider of 4-8% alcohol content was the most popular beverage among rural New Englanders. Most families kept at least eight to ten barrels in their cellar for consumption throughout the year.

Each fall residents of the early 19th-century town would take their harvested apples and barrels to one of the town's four or five mills, similar to Old Sturbridge Village's mill, to be crushed and pressed into cider. After pressing, the barrels of cider would then be delivered home and extras might be added to adapt the cider to each family's taste. These extras might be brandy or rum to raise the alcohol level, isinglass, egg shells, charcoal, or sand to prevent spoilage, or meat to mature the flavor. The treated cider would then be consumed throughout the year as a beverage or be converted into cider molasses or vinegar for use in open hearth cooking.

Many of these aspects of early 19th-century cider making can be seen at Old Sturbridge Village this fall. Visitors can listen to costumed interpreters negotiating a fee for the use of the mill, see apples being crushed and pressed into cider at the mill, and then wander from home to home in the Center Village, talking with costumed interpreters about the different flavorings that each household might have added to its cider in the 1830s.

The cider mill will interest people of all ages in a New England tradition that has stood the test of time. While the cider making process and the flavor and alcohol content of the cider may have changed over the years, its popularity as a traditional fall beverage has remained constant. Old Sturbridge Village offers the visitors the unique experience of stepping back in time and seeing how this tradition of cider making was carried out years ago at an early 19th-century horse-powered mill.

Funding for the cider mill exhibit was provided in part by a grant from the George I. Alden Trust.

For more information on the cider mill exhibit and other fall activities at Old Sturbridge Village, contact Kristi Kienholz, Coordinator of Press & Media Services at Old Sturbridge Village at 617-347-3362.

Old Sturbridge Village is a living history museum that recreates a New England town of the 1830s. The museum covers over 200 acres with more than 40 restored buildings where people in historical dress demonstrate the life, work, and community celebrations of early 19th-century New Englanders.

Part time jobs boost college funds

Discover how college students, especially engineers and technology majors, get good paying part time jobs which integrate work experience with their major education curriculum. A new book published by Student College Aid, a nationwide, computerized, scholarship locator service, explains this and more.

Every year, college students in the know, earn over $5,000 a year for part time or cooperative education work. Their work matches their course of study or degree plan. They learn while they earn. Often, upon graduation, the same employer offers permanent employment at above normal starting salary.

These students have a headstart on fellow graduates as their resume indicates actual job experience. Over 1,000 colleges and universities participate in these programs; over 150 different curricula are available for study and work.

"How & Where to Get Good Paying, Career Oriented College Jobs" explains cooperative education, its advantages for student and employer, and how and where to get into the program. The book is $7.50 plus $1.50 postage/handling.

SCA's book, "How to Obtain Maximum College Financial Aid" explains how to qualify for governmental aid when you think you can't. It explains how to handle your income and assets so you do qualify. With the threatened reduction in governmental college aid, these tactics and strategies are more important than ever. Book, 350, is $7.00 plus $1.00 postage/handling.

"Guide To Outdoor Careers" tells students where jobs are in outdoor fields, how to investigate the market, pick an employer, and write the best resume for outdoor jobs. This book is $7.50 plus $1.50 postage/handling. Satisfaction on all books is guaranteed or your money is refunded. For books, write SCA, Dept. S, 3641 Deal St., Houston, Texas 77025. Roving from S-1 isn't even Joe Shmoe who appears in the commercials. I recently watched a profile on TV about this guy from California who specializes in making low-budget commercials for car dealers across the country. He appears in dozens of commercials all over the country, presenting himself as the car dealer himself.

This sharp-looking, fast-talking pitch man injects the kind of verve into the commercials that the actual owner lacks, and according to some owners who were interviewed, these commercials work because their car sales go up whenever the ads are shown on local tv.

The local guy getting on local tv to pitch his merchandise was where tv commercials got their start, and, ironically, with the advent of cable tv, the local guy getting on tv to sell his stuff is where tv commercials are going back to. In some instances the local guy never left the tube.

One of the most successful local guys to get on local tv to try to convince the public to buy his product is Ernie Boch, the "come on down" car dealer from the South Shore. To my knowledge, Boch was one of the originators of the trend towards doing your own pitching in tv commercials, and he's still around, still yelling "come on down" at the end of his tv ads, albeit he has more money these days to make his commercials a tad better technically.

The original concept of the local guy getting on tv to sell his own product came about because it was cheaper than hiring a big ad agency to do it for you. With all the cable tv time available these days the trend is making a comeback, and it is still relatively cheap.

All you have to do is show up at the tv station, stand in front of the camera and let your pitch roll. Sure, it isn't as technically tight as an agency production, but when you're talking about local cable tv, or even some of the UHF stations, which is where we see most of the local pitchmen, who cares? The object is to get your message across to as many people as possible and as cheaply as possible.

There are drawbacks to this type of advertising. With newspapers and magazines, you see the ad, and if it happens to appeal to you, you will remember the ad. There is nothing about the ad that rubs against your grain, annoying you to the point where you no longer want to think about it. You see it, and because it is pitching a product you're interested in, you keep it in mind.

But with some of these tv commercials, we hear them and see them so many times that, even if we are interested in what they are selling us, we begin to tune them out. We get to a point where we don't pay any attention to them anymore. The local guy who gets on tv to pitch his product knows this, but he doesn't really care.

Why? Because even though we've begun to make fun of him, as so many people did when Ernie Boch first started telling us to "come on down," he's achieved his goal.

We've established an identification between him and his product, an identification that remains in our subconscious until it's time for us to go out to buy that product. When it comes time for me to buy an Oldsmobile, there's a pretty good chance I'll at least give good old friendly Ernie Boch some consideration.

I may end up making a better deal somewhere else, but Ernie Boch's "come on down" will certainly be a real temptation. As silly as he may seem on that tube, he's selling a lot of cars because of those ads.

Frankly, with all due respect to the local businessmen who are making their pitches for our dollars on tv, I'm tired of watching the same old style of commercials on tv. That goes for these fancy agency ads on national tv, too.

And this current trend towards the local guy getting on local tv to sell his product only spells more mediocrity. It doesn't mean there'll be more innovative ads, regardless of how well they sell the products, just more of the same dull, even obnoxious, stuff. Perhaps this boredom with tv commercials in general is one of the reasons for the extraordinary success of pay cable networks.

For now, at least, most of them are devoid of commercials (a few have begun to run advertisements on a limited basis, and it's likely others will follow), and many viewers enjoy the uninterrupted programming.

One of the enjoyable aspects of the uninterrupted programming on pay cable for me has been some of the no-holds barred comedy shows, such as the one called Not Necessarily the News, that have sprung up recently.

I get a real kick out of them, especially since many of the skits poke fun directly at network television. Some of the poking fun has been focused on network tv commercials. One spoof I saw poked some good-natured fun at the local guy who will go to any extreme, in some cases making a complete idiot of himself, just to sell his product.

You know, I think we need more of that. In fact, I've got my own ideas for tv commercials, but they're commercials I doubt you'll ever see on free tv. You might see them on a show like Not Necessarily the News, however.

For instance, what if onion breath were the "in" thing? I'd like to see a tv commercial in which a married couple awake in their bed in the morning, and the wife turns to her husband and says, "Honey, your breath smells sweet this morning. Go suck on an onion, please." Then the camera switches to this guy who urges you to gargle every morning with a particular brand of onion-flavored mouthwash. Guaranteed to make your breath pungent and your marriage run smoother. Now that would be innovative!

Toilet bowls are a disgusting subject for commercials. I'd like to see an ad with a little man in a boat floating in a toilet bowl and telling us how we can keep our toilet smelling like a swamp simply by using a tiny pee-green tablet which you drop into your tank once a week or so, flush, then watch as the murky, swamp-like water fills your bowl. Not only does your bowl look and smell horrendous, it now has a myriad of germs lingering around till the next time you drop in one of those pee-green tablets.

Kitchens are a favorite topic of tv commercials. The one you'll never see on free tv would focus on the dish soap detergent that leaves a thick, greasy film on all of your dishes, not to mention spots the size of dimes on your glasses. No lemon-fresh scent here, folks.

This stuff smells like rotten eggs. That way, you'll never have to worry about inviting your in-laws and neighbors back for dinner ever again.

If the slimy dishes don't keep unwanted questions away, how about trying that new product which leaves your house smelling like a high school gymnasium?

This commercial would feature the typical frumpy-looking housewife telling you she's tried everything to duplicate the odor of the old girls' locker room in her living room, even to the point of leaving a pair of old sneakers hanging around by the couch. Then she'll tell you she doesn't have to do that anymore, now that she's discovered a new spray, which, when dispensed liberally around the house, leaves you inhaling the nostalgic, authentic smell of a gym right after it's been used for a basketball game all day long.

These are all pretty ridiculous ideas for tv commercials, but that's the point I wanted to make. Because the commercials we tv viewers are being subjected to these days are just as ridiculous. We've oot everything from a freaky-looking little guy with a high-pitched voice screaming out his deal on lamps to a couple of over-weight characters in running suits telling us about all the products you can rent from their store. In between you've got enough real commercials about bad breath, dirty toilet bowls, dirty dishes and smelly living rooms to make you long for the days when you read by candlelight.

The whole concept of selling on tv has become ridiculous, yet, as I've said, it works. For some crazy reason, we will fall for those pitches, we'll listen to the little guy in the boat floating in the toilet tank, no matter how much we moan and groan about how foolish they are. And long after we've tuned them out, we will still go to the marketplace and buy the products we are most familiar with.

What this all boils down to, I guess, is the old adage "there's one born every minute." As long as that's true, as long as there's one of us suckers born every minute, there will always be a local guy willing to go on tv to make a fool on himself just to get us suckers to buy his product. We'll continue to say we can't stand to look at his puss anymore, or to listen to his pitches any longer, but then we'll rush out and spend. Only in America, folks.

Teen Wolf from S-12

wholesomeness in Teen Wolf will help it to attract a younger crowd.

Actually, because of the apparent low budget for this film, the only audience it may end up with is the kids, because the interesting premise and consistently good acting in Teen Wolf just couldn't overcome a serious cash flow problem.

Michael J. Fox (Back to the Future) portrays Scott, basketball player-cum-wolf, with such quirky good humor that you just can't help but like him. Fox is good at playing a worrier. His troubles are written all over his face and the very tremble in his voice gives him away. Fox has much more depth to him than most young actors, and is a real pleasure to watch.

The supporting cast is as delightful as Fox. James Hampton as his jolly, chubby dad has a few tricks up his sleeve, and Jay Tarses stands out as the scruffy, oddball of a basketball coach who gives off-the-wall, humorous advice to his students.

The problems with the film are most entirely monetary. Since the story is far-fetched to begin with, you can't really complain about the silliness, it just comes with the territory. But the budget is another matter all together. Fox's werewolf costume is ridiculous. The fur is far more reminiscent of a lion than a wolf, and when he is upright and playing basketball, you'd swear he walked right out of the poor man's version of Planet of the Apes. But, in all honesty, the kids in the audience didn't seem to notice, and howled right along with Fox as he tried to adjust to his more than ordinary hormonal changes.

People named an area in South Dakota the "Badlands," because it was poor farmland and difficult to traverse. This vast exhibit of many-colored ravines, ridges, valleys and hills was proclaimed a national monument in 1929.

Compromising Positions Key Exchange Teen Wolf

Key Exchange Starring Brooke Adams, Ben Masters, Daniel Stern. Directed by Barnet Kellman. Produced by Mitchell Maxwell, Paul Kurta. Screenplay by Kevin Scott, Kurta. Based on the play by Kevin Wade.

Simple and winsome, Key Exchange is as refreshing as a cool breeze on a hot August night.

Not what one would call an "important" film, this charming tale of Yuppie love in the Big Apple is not going to change anyone's philosophy on life, win an Academy Award or even inspire great deeds. It will, however, make you smile, perhaps put a slight, if temporary, spring in your step and give new hope to the perhaps radical thought that, yes, there can be a comedy, even a summer release, that does not feature hormonally imbalanced teenagers.

A romance, it involves an assistant producer for a morning talk show (Brooke Adams) and her boyfriend, a mystery writer (Ben Masters). She is involved in her job, and wants to become more involved with him. He wants to ride his racing bike around New York, ogle and chase after beautiful women and just keep a "thing" going with her.

Masters' character can't face the involvement of an "exclusive" arrangement, and panic breaks out on his face like a rash when Adams suggests they swap spare apartment keys, meaning each can enter into the others lives at a moment's notice. The main portion of the story is then devoted to Masters overcoming his great fear of commitment, or Adams getting over him. It wouldn't be fair to tell more.

There is a subplot dealing with Daniel Stern (Diner) as a newly-married lawyer that is nearly as interesting as the main story. The entire film is smooth and funny and at the very least, amusing. Tony Roberts as the talk show host and Danny Aiello as a detective whom Masters is observing as raw material for his novels are as energetic and textured as the three main performers.

Bicycle racing, the singles scene and even an ad-libbed appearance by Mayor Edward Koch add to the fun. The film keeps its upbeat tempo right through to the end, and never suffers from mid-movie drag, as so many comedies do. Not that it is ever uproariously funny, but it is occasionally humorous enough to make you laugh out loud, and will consistently make you smile.

One of the reasons that Adams and Masters interact so easily and give such multi-layered performances is they have nurtured the roles from Off-Off-Broadway to Off-Broadway to the movie studio. Director Barnet Kellman has been along for the whole ride as well. It is their baby, and it shows.

Compromising Positions Starring Susan Sarandon, Raul Julia, Edward Herrmann, Judith Ivey, Anne de Salvo, Josh Mostel. Directed and produced by Frank Perry. Screenplay by Susan Isaacs, from her novel. Rated R (profanity, violence, nudity).

A periodontist is murdered with one of his instruments in his office, resulting in a shocked community. After a closer look, however, the trauma seems a bit too intense, and terribly one-sided. It appears that only the distaff side of the community is shedding all of the tears, mainly because this was one dentist who did more than just clean the teeth of his female patients on a regular basis.

While many weep over the demise of their overly friendly dentist, one feminine member of this wealthy suburban neighborhood is trying to satisfy her peaked curiosity. Judith Singer, played by Susan Sarandon, simply can't believe that a man who only a week before had his fingers in her mouth has ruined her concept of a perfect community by getting himself murdered.

Sarandon's character, a housewife, is also an ex-reporter — the most popular characters outside of evil real estate developers in the past cinematic year. She is feeling trapped and bored by her marriage, and is itching to go back to work. Digging up a great story on her dead dentist seems just the key.

Making it even more of an adventure is a detective (Raul Julia) who is much more attentive to her than Edward Herrmann, as her workaholic husband. However, some of the major plot flaws occur when these two are together. Granted, she is gathering information he needs, but a detective taking what is apparently nothing more than a nosy housewife under his wing and including her in his investigation is far-fetched.

One really does have to suspend their disbelief to enjoy Compromising Positions, as some of it is almost on a campy level. It is not a true-to-form mystery, but more of a comedy with mysterious overtones. Viewed in this manner, it becomes an amusing, albeit silly, film.

While the plot might fall somewhere between mediocre to good, the acting is quite pleasing. Sarandon is peppy, articulate and great with a comeback. Julia, a bear of a man, exudes warmth. Best of all, however, is Judith Ivey as a salty sculptor who is right on target with her zinging dialogue. She looks, and sounds, striking.

The one character in the film who is totally unsympathetic is Herrmann. Don't misunderstand, his performance is up to its consistently excellent level, but the man he plays is a selfish, tunnel-visioned lawyer whose only apparent existence in the film is so that Sarandon's housewife could make a few feminist motions. This was not handled smoothly enough, and should have been axed. Perhaps Herrmann would be better off with more classical roles, and leave such commercial films as Compromising

EDWARD HERRMANN stars as a workaholic Wall Street lawyer who is angered when his wife becomes involved in a murder investigation in Paramount Pictures' comic whodunit, "Compromising Positions."

Teen Wolf

Positions for actors of whom we do not have such grandiose expectations.

Teen Wolf starring Michael J. Fox, James Hampton, Susan Ursitti, Jerry Levine, Lorie Griffin. Directed by Rod Daniel. Produced by Mark Levinson, Scott Rosenfelt. Written by Joseph Loeb III, Matthew Weisman. Rated PG (profanity).

A nice, average boy in a nice, average town. He wants nothing more than to rise above the median line of his teenaged years and be unusual, different, someone special. Well, he gets his wish when his ears start to grow, fur pops out on the back of his hands and his voice is replaced by a menacing growl. Not a bad premise, really. By taking the fear out of the old werewolf story and replacing it with comedy, the twist is different enough to capture an entire new group of werewolf fans. And, with the exception of some profanity, the Ladies get into the swim during 'Gay '90s'

By Ink Mendelsohn
Smithsonian News Service

The bare necessities were itemized: a pair of drawers, a long-skirted and long-sleeved dress, a small cape - all made of wool - plus a pair of large lisle thread (cotton) gloves, an oil cap to cover the hair, a straw hat to shield the face and gum overshoes to guard tender feet. In an 1856 summer issue of Peterson's Magazine, "Fashions for August, Bathing Dresses" was advising women about the appropriate attire for sea bathing. A lady didn't have to be advised of the need for the corset she would wear beneath this recommended beach ensemble - all of which was to be worn in the water.

Anchored in tradition, American women didn't start swimming in any numbers until the late-19th century. Ladies dipped. They dunked. They plunged. However, as more women began to take more than the plunge, fewer and briefer bathing garments came to be required by social convention. Bathing wear in America has been a barometer not only of a change in the weather but of change in the air as well.

"Looking at bathing costume at any particular period in America's history reveals something about that era's notions of what was appropriate masculine behavior and what was appropriate feminine behavior," the Smithsonian's Claudia Kidwell observes. Kidwell, curator in the Division of Costume at the National Museum of American History in Washington, D.C., notes that these prevailing "gender conventions" based upon the premise of women as the weaker and more modest sex have strongly influenced what Americans - men and women - wore in public waters.

In the beginning, man swam nude in America's rivers, lakes, ponds and swimming holes. Women, it was supposed in an earlier and more innocent time in the life of the republic, were too modest to loiter at water's edge where men might be swimming "au naturel." President John Quincy Adams, taking an early morning dip in the Potomac, learned otherwise when reporter Anne Royall sat and even a rabbit-filled spot originally called Coony Island. Improving means of transportation made mixed bathing at seaside resorts more popular than ever, but American women still were not moving through the water. A male correspondent reported from Newport,

Above: The gay nineties are personified by these sea sprites captured by a photographer at Narragansett Pier in 1897. They would return to the ocean dressed the same way, although, with enlightened attitudes abroad in the land, the ladies might possibly remove their detachable skirts and go swimming in the long drawers concealed beneath.

R.I., in 1857, that men who wished to "bathe promiscuously" could "put on a dress and go in with the ladies" but those who wished "to cultivate the fine and froggy art of swimming unencumbered by attire" had better wait until the red flag went up warning the ladies to retire.

down on his clothes and refused to move until he gave her an exclusive interview.

Founding Father Benjamin Franklin was one of America's earliest enthusiasts of swimming as healthy and enjoyable exercise. A one-time swimming teacher, among other things, he authored "The Art of Swimming" and instructed friends like Oliver Neale in the aquatic art. In 1776, he wrote to Neale advising him to "walk coolly" into the water up to his breast, turn around toward the shore and throw an egg into the water. "Then plunge under it with your eyes open, throwing yourself towards the egg..."

Dr. Franklin's colorful swimming instructions were directed only to his male friends. In Colonial America in the last half of the 18th century, women were expected merely to immerse themselves in the water. Men and women had begun bathing - separately - in mineral springs for therapeutic purposes. Although women bathed only with women, they wore long, loose gowns that did not "show the figure." One such outfit, said to have been worn by Martha Washington at what is today Berkeley Springs, W. Va., was a chemise-type, blue-and-white-checked linen gown with lead disks attached near the hem to keep the garment in place when Mrs. Washington entered or exited the water.

Floating baths built in the early-19th century made bathing more a treat than a treatment. These compartmentalized buildings with individual baths sunk beneath the water's surface were boasted by such cities as Boston, Hartford, New York, Richmond, Philadelphia, Charleston and Savannah. Men and women in separate rooms could partake of rum, wine, punch, coffee or other refreshments as they safely enjoyed rippling river waters or the ebb and flow of the great ocean, without ever leaving the city.

But soon came the siren call of distant and exotic shores - such as the one called Jersey. American men and women responded. "Mixed sea bathing became an American innovation in the second quarter of the 19th century," Claudia Kidwell says. "In England, men and women didn't bathe together at public beaches until the early 1900s. 'A European traveler, one James Stuart, describing the sea-bathing situation at Long Branch, N.J., in 1829, decried 'ill-founded stories of want of delicacy on the part of American females since 'the parties always go into the water completely dressed.'"

Chinese exhibit at Museum of Science

By CHERRIE DUBOIS

China, that land of mystery and the exotic, the land of Cathy "discovered" by Marco Polo, is here in Boston through December 1 at the Museum of Science.

Officially billed as "China: 7000 Years of Discovery," the show provides live demonstrations of several arts and crafts with some hands-on exhibits which appeal to children of all ages.

As you enter the exhibition space, you first confront a time chart which graphs the discovery date for a particular skill in China and its "discovery" date in the Western world. China beat us at inventing paper, movable type, gunpowder, and all manner of other things.

One of the most fascinating stories is the story of silk. Each cocoon contains a mile of slender thread that's stronger than an equal thickness of many metals.

You can see this thread being woven into intricate damask designs by a master weaver and drawboy working in tandem at a replica of a 2000-year-old loom. As the drawboy pulls on certain strings several feet away from the weaver, strands of the silken fabric are raised, thereby creating the pattern. Although China now has computerized electrical looms which can create damask with incredible speed, seeing this ancient craft plied by skilled artisans is an enlightening experience.

For a writer, watching the slow and painstaking fabrication of paper makes me wonder how I could ever throw away a piece if it were handmade. The pulpy mixture is scooped up on a wide meshed tray and done just so to create an even surface and uniform thickness. Then each piece must be dried. Today, handmade paper is used most often by artists, not careless scribes who change their minds every four words.

In addition to a brush painter, the China exhibit features block printing, where a young Chinese woman actually prints a series of 200 identical pictures by using several blocks in succession. The ease with which she does it indicates years of experience and practice.

Of all the crafts displayed, perhaps the most fascinating and amazing was silk embroidery. "Oh, that's not so hard," you may say. Well, it is to make two different images, one on each side of the fabric with the same stitches.

A panting dog on one side and a serious one on the other; a woman's back to one side with her face to you on the other; an eagle on one side and a white egret on another — well, it fairly boggles the mind.

According to a museum staff member, there are only four women in the world who can do double-sided embroidery. And, mind you, they do it without a pattern book or guide. First they design it and then execute it, holding all the stitches and colors in their heads without looking on the backside to keep checking. After about a year of working about seven hours a day, they will have completed a double-sided piece.

Every step in this exhibit reflects a new revelation, a new level or range of skill. China's artisans are truly a national treasure, one which that nation is sharing with Boston and has shared with four other lucky American cities.

You should make every effort to see "7000 Years of Discovery" because it is not likely to be repeated either in our lifetimes or ever, for many of these arts are dying ones.

★ POSTAL JOBS ★

LETTER SORTING MACHINE OPERATORS
Official Title: Distribution Clerk, Machine
($9.48/hr. to start)

Special announcement for all candidates planning to sign up for the Distribution Clerk, Machine (LSM) Examination at the Woburn Post Office. APPLICATIONS ARE BEING ACCEPTED SEPTEMBER 9TH THROUGH SEPTEMBER 13TH ONLY. [Last given in 1983 — and since it won't be offered again for at least 3 years, don't miss out!]

4½-HOUR WORKSHOP
Score 95-100% or Your Tuition is Refunded!

NOW is the time to prepare. The pressure is on to score as high as possible to get the job. Career Postal Workers will now earn a starting salary of $18,532 plus benefits — with an accelerated step increase plan; men and women, regardless of age, are eligible. The first step toward a postal service career is getting your name onto the "Register of Eligibles," which is accomplished by passing this Exam. To be one of the first hired, you need to get one of the higher scores! And to be hired at all during the next three years, you will need to score at least 95%.

Come to the workshop. If you don't feel, at the end of the course, that it will help you achieve a score of 95% or better, don't pay for the workshop! Furthermore, if your score is less than 95% on the official exam after using our techniques, we will immediately refund your tuition in full!

WANT TO RELOCATE? We are the publishers of The Postal Alert, the bi-weekly newsletter giving you postal exam dates nationwide. Only the Achievement Center provides this service. Learn how you can relocate to any area of the country you like.

You are invited to bring your tape recorder to record the workshop for personal review.
You may attend as many extra sessions of the workshop as you like (on a space available basis) without additional tuition charge.
WORKSHOP TUITION — $40 (includes guaranteed 4½-hour Workshop, The Core Guide to Postal Exams [with 6 complete practice tests], a Sample Exam with Answers, Workshop Workbook, 12 Important Steps for Getting Hired into the U.S. Postal Service "Booklet", Follow-up consultation privileges, Achievement Award to high scorers and Practice Kit containing Six Additional Practice Exams with Answers, Memory Test Flash Cards, and "Simulated Exam" on cassette tape). Please bring two No. 2 pencils with you to the Workshop.

Seating is limited, pre-registration by phone is advised. Otherwise, you may register by arriving thirty minutes early. Tuition is payable at the door by cash, check, money order, MasterCard, VISA or American Express.

At most banks, it's still called "teller". But at BayBanks, we're too progressive to leave it at that. So as a Customer Service Representative, along with handling our customers' daily transactions, you'll have the valuable opportunity to receive paid training. But the benefits are something we haven't changed. They're comprehensive and offered to any customer service rep working at least 20 hours per week; paid holidays and vacation, medical insurance, paid personal and sick days, tuition reimbursement, life and accident insurances, a retirement/pension plan, and more.
